The School+Family Alliance Strategy Guidelines

We are thrilled to announce that the School+Family Alliance Strategy Guidelines are now available.

Built from the collaboration of Sofia University, Athens Lifelong Learning Institute, Aproximar, PRISM, Growth Coop and Ege University, this document explores actionable strategies, best practices, and key frameworks designed to strengthen the partnership between schools and families, ensuring inclusive educational environments for all students, especially those from disadvantaged backgrounds.

The School+Family Alliance Strategy Guidelines is not just a resource but a call to action for educators, policymakers, and families to unite in their efforts.

Supportive Educational Ecosystems

The Strategy Guidelines emphasize the need for cohesive national and European policies, promoting parental involvement, and equipping educators with the tools to engage families effectively. From improving communication between schools and homes to fostering parental engagement in decision-making, the strategies outlined provide a roadmap for creating supportive educational ecosystems. The professional development of educators is a central factor in this matter, since it enables them to better collaborate with families, overcome barriers to involvement, and support students' success. The Strategy Guidelines further highlight the importance of fostering trust, inclusivity, and collaboration within schools to enhance family engagement and student outcomes.

The School+Family Alliance Partnership highlights that by building strong, cooperative relationships, we can create a more equitable educational system where every child is supported, and every family is engaged.
